

LEADERSHIP ATTRIBUTES

By: M. Louise Walters, PhD ABD, MM, BS, IOM

What makes a good leader? The subject is a never-ending source of discussion and debate. Ask anybody to describe the kinds of attributes leaders have and you'll get many different responses.

Here are some attributes to consider. A leader has (in no certain order):

Vision	Innovative thoughts	Loyalty
Intelligence	Character	Drive (as opposed to ambition)
Wisdom	Diplomacy	Openness and transparency
Integrity	Patience	Strategic thinking ability
Empathy	Ability to build consensus	Time
Ability to collaborate	Creativity	Passion
Persistence	Connections	Positive attitude
Compassion	Self-discipline	Respect for others
Humility	Analytical abilities	Communication skills
Determination	Tolerance for risk	Generosity
Commitment	Courage	Active listening skills

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

M. Louise Walters, PhD ABD, is a veteran organization management executive. She is completing her Doctoral dissertation in organizational leadership at Capella University. She holds a 2012 Master of Management degree and a 2010 Bachelor of Science degree and a 2009 Associate of Applied Science degree in Legal Studies - all from National American University.

She can be reached at: louisewalters@theleadershipcenter.com

View The Leadership Center website at: www.theleadershipcenter.com